FOREWORD

This list of selected trade associations is designed to fill a need for which the Bureau of Foreign and Domestic Commerce has been made increasingly aware during the past year and a half. With the advent of the NRA and the encouragement which it gave to the trade association movement, the Bureau has been besieged with requests for the revision of the list of trade associations previously issued but now out of date. It is in answer to such requests and to fill what we feel to be a real need on the part of American business that this list has been prepared by our Marketing Research and Service Division.

Acknowledgment is hereby made of the helpful cooperation which the Bureau has received in the compilation of this list from many sources. The following organizations are deserving of special mention:

American Trade Association Executives,
Chamber of Commerce of the United States,
National Association of Manufacturers,
Special Libraries Association (The business-libraries affiliate of the American Library Association)
The American Telephone and Telegraph Company.

This list was prepared under the general supervision of Wilford L. White, Chief of the Marketing Research and Service Division, by C. Judkins, Chief of the Trade Association Section, with the assistance of L. Marceron and A. S. Grant.

Introduction

This publication contains a list of approximately 2,500 trade associations, largely national and interstate, with headquarters in the United States. It supplements, to a degree, "Commercial and Industrial Organizations of the United States", the eighth edition of which was published by the Bureau of Foreign and Domestic Commerce in 1931. 1/.

Definition of Trade Association

The present booklet is restricted, with few exceptions, to trade associations, defined as follows:

> Voluntary organizations of business competitors, usually in one branch of the industrial, trade, or service fields, whose aim is to promote that branch through cooperative activities in two or more of the following phases: Accounting practices, arbitration, business standards, commercial research, industrial research, public relations, statistics, and trade promotion.

As a result, agricultural, labor, professional, and scientific organizations, many of which were listed in the earlier compilation, have not been included. The list does include, however, associations of American importers and exporters and international chambers of commerce.

Number of Selected Trade Associations

It has been estimated that less than 50 interstate or national trade associations were operating by 1875, among which were the still existing Writing Paper Manufacturers Association, United States Brewers Association, National Association of Wool Manufacturers, National Association of Cotton Manufacturers, and the National Board of Fire Underwriters. There were approximately 100 by 1900, and over 1,000 by 1920. 2/ This rapid growth in number has continued.

1/ Obtainable from the Government Printing Office, Washington, D.C., 85 cents. The 1931 edition of 385 pages included over 5,000 national, interstate, and state, and over 13,000 local organizations in the fields of trade, labor, agriculture, education, and the professions.

2/ See "Trade Association Activities", U. S. Department of Commerce, 1923 (2nd edition was issued in 1927); also, "Trade Associations", National Industrial Conference Board, New York City, 1927.

Generally speaking, the largest number of local groups is in the trade and business service fields. Most national and interstate trade associations, on the other hand, are those of manufacturers, since their sales areas frequently have broader geographical scope. A summary picture of the respective numbers in this 1934 listing of the nation's larger trade associations is given below:

	Associations
Manufacturers	1,900
Wholesalers and retailers	300
Business services	200
Foreign trade	100
	2,500

Location of Selected Trade Associations

The map on the following page shows, in round numbers, the locations of the trade associations herein listed. It will be seen that the headquarters offices of the great majority of associations are in those states which are primarily industrial. Many national associations, however, have regional and local offices.

The tabular statement below shows, for the three states having the largest number of national and interstate trade association headquarters in 1934, their total manufacturing, wholesaling, retailing, and business service establishments, as reported by the Bureau of the Census, for 1933, with the exception of manufacturing establishments:

Approximate number of	In New York	In Illinois	In Pennsylvania	All Other States	Total number in the United States

Effect of N.R.A. Upon Trade Associations

The number and scope of the activities of national and interstate trade associations in this country have increased appreciably since the National Recovery Administration was authorized although it is not known how many of the present total were formed as a result of the impetus of the N.R.A. program. Generally, each "Code of Fair Competition" was sponsored by one or more national trade associations and a large number of affiliated interstate, state, and local trade groups. N.R.A.'s largest code, "Retail Trade", was sponsored by national associations in the fields of dry goods, furniture, hardware, mail order, men's clothing, music merchants, shoes, and variety stores, and their 700 local affiliated trade associations.

By January 1, 1935, over 540 basic and 180 supplemental codes had been approved. These included approximately three million business firms with 22 million employees. The law establishing the N.R.A. (Public Act No. 67, 73rd Congress, signed by Presiden Franklin D. Roosevelt on June 16, 1933) does not cover the nation's approximately 20 million other wage and salaried workers and employers on the farms, in the professions, and domestic and government employees.

The Act establishing the "N.R.A." states in part:

> "A National emergency productive of widespread unemployment and disorganization of industry ..... (exists). It is hereby declared to be the policy of Congress to ..... provide for the general welfare by promoting the organization of industry for the purpose of cooperative action among trade groups, to induce and maintain united action of labor and management under adequate governmental sanction and supervision, to eliminate unfair competitive practices....."

The National Recovery Administration has pointed out major differences between trade associations and code authorities, as follows:

> "A TRADE ASSOCIATION is a voluntary organization of business men, joined together for the development of their particular industry....., it undertakes those activities which may be more economically or effectively handled than if done by the individual member....., it is responsible solely to its members....., financial contributions to its activities are voluntary.
> "A CODE AUTHORITY is an agency of limited powers and functions. Membership thereon is a public trust, and is aided and safe-guarded by governmental sanction and supervision. The funotions of a code authority as such do not extend beyond the scope of the code." 1/

A sample survey of 1,000 national and interstate associations, made by the Trade Association Section of the Department of Commerce in the fall of 1934, showed that the nation's largest trade associations have 25 or more members on their paid staffs, and ten or more separate bureaus, to each of which one or more staff members devote full time, under the guidance of the executive director or secretary and special advisory committees of the members.

1/ Press release of May 29, 1934.

Managers of associations with more limited funds, however, are able to carry on effective programs in spite of a small staff, and are making wide use of advisory and operating committees. The above-mentioned survey indicated that the annual budgets of the majority of the 1,000 associations were between $25,000 and $75,000.

Principal Activities

Among the principal activities now under way in larger trade associations are:

1. Development of sound intra-industry relations. Intra-industry relations are being brought about by setting up standard trade practices, codes, and regulations; developing plans of arbitration to lift the burden of litigation from industry and the creation of uniform contracts.

2. Plans for stabilizing employment. Founded upon the principles already adopted by various leading factors in industry, stabilized employment is being given much attention. The "peak" and "valley" periods must be better adjusted in each industry to attain the steady employment for labor which both employer and employee organizations desire.

3. Market research and analysis. Studies are being made to discover and define the most profitable markets, to measure the effects of seasonal fluctuations, and to determine other factors of distribution that forward or retard the growth of an industry.

4. Cooperative marketing and sales promotion. Provided with effective market research surveys and faced with the decreased national "purchasing power" of recent years, progressive trade associations are endeavoring to create sound policies of market development and to promote the sale of a commodity, product, or service on an industry basis.

5. Product research. Product research is an effort to develop new products adapted to the machinery, equipment, and established technique of the industry, and to the discovery of new uses for existing products and by-products.

6. Simplification and standardization. Policies and practices are being developed for the simplification of varieties in shape, size, quality, process and composition; and the standardization of nomenclature, uniformity in dimensions to secure interchangeability of parts, standard methods of testing quality and performance, and other methods of bringing about greater industrial efficiency.

7. Cost accounting. The advent of N.R.A. with its condemnation of unfair competition caused by selling below cost, has hastened the development of uniform systems of recording and reporting unit costs of production and marketing.

8. Budget forecasting and statistical control. Trade associations are furthering the development of standard systems of budget forecasting and industry planning as a guide to production and distribution policies, as well as to investment and equipment plans.

9. Cross-licensing or pooling of patents. A number of leading industries have solved the problem of interfering patents or claims, which otherwise might have been ruinous to the development of a new or to the improvement of an existing industry, by various cross-licensing plans.

Department of Commerce

The U. S. Department of Commerce, the Federal Trade Commission, and the U. S. Department of Justice are the larger agencies of the Federal Government which have been in closest touch with trade associations during past years. Trade groups find it most helpful to have at hand a copy of the latest annual reports of each of these agencies. They can be obtained from the Government Printing Office, Washington, D. C., at nominal prices. 1/

The Commerce Department is made up of eleven bureaus, many of which are in daily touch with trade associations. All have headquarters in Washington, D. C., most of them being in the Department of Commerce Building. Their publications are listed in the (free) "List of Publications of the Department of Commerce" (140 pp.) published in July, 1934. A few of the duties of some of these 11 bureaus are given below:

BUREAU OF FOREIGN AND DOMESTIC COMMERCE: Among its official duties are: "To promote and develop the foreign and domestic commerce of the United States; to report upon domestic as well as foreign problems relating to production, distribution, and marketing insofar as they relate to the important export industries of the United States; to operate and maintain district and cooperative offices within the United States". The Bureau maintains offices in 32 foreign countries. The distribution work of the Bureau is facilitated by 24 district offices maintained in the important commercial centers of the United States. In addition, arrangements have been made with 54 chambers of commerce and commercial organizations in many other cities which act as direct representatives of the Bureau in the work of foreign and domestic trade promotion. These branch offices expedite the distribution of commercial information and establish closer relations between the Government and private industry.

Twenty-two industrial service and technical divisions, in charge of experts, are in operation:

1/ Those issued in late 1934 were:
22nd Annual Report, U. S. Dept. of COMMERCE
20th " " FEDERAL TRADE COMMISSION
64th " " U. S. Dept. of JUSTICE

The Bureau cooperates closely with committees of trade associations and other representatives of American industry.

The services of the Bureau in domestic commerce are directed toward providing the American manufacturer, wholesaler, and retailer with accurate and definite data upon which he can base efficient merchandising methods and thus reduce the wastes in the distribution system. These services aim to make available more adequate knowledge of markets and distribution costs.

BUREAU OF THE CENSUS: This Bureau takes the national censuses of population, occupation, mines and quarries, etc. every ten years; of agriculture, horticulture and irrigation, every five years; and of manufactures every two years. It took a census of construction covering 1929; of national employment, 1930; of retailing, wholesaling, and hotels covering the years 1929 and 1933; of business services and amusement enterprises, 1933. Its reports on the 1933 "Census of American Business", issued in 1934, covered 1,526,119 retailers, 502,416 service and amusement industries and 164,101 wholesalers. Its 1933 "Census of Manufactures" included approximately 142,000 industrial establishments. The Bureau also collects monthly or quarterly data regarding the production or supply of many commodities, including cotton, wool (activity of machinery) hosiery, shoes, men's and boys' clothing, fabricated steel plate, automobiles, air conditioning equipment, clay products, fats and oils, paints, varnish and lacquer products, etc.

NATIONAL BUREAU OF STANDARDS: Its functions are the development, construction, custody, and maintenance of reference and working standards and their intercomparison, improvement, and application in science, engineering, industry, and commerce.

The Bureau's functions are exercised for the National Government, State Governments, and (subject to reasonable fees) the general public. Its unique research and testing facilities are used to discover and evaluate material standards and to solve basic technical problems. It assists in size standardization of containers and products. Standards of performance are usually specifications for the operative efficiency of machines or devices; their ultimate purpose is to make exact knowledge the basis of the buyer's choice and to clarify the understanding between maker, seller, buyer, and user.

The eight remaining divisions of the Department of Commerce are: AIR COMMERCE, COAST AND GEODETIC SURVEY, FISHERIES, LIGHTHOUSES, NAVIGATION and STEAMBOAT INSPECTION, PATENT OFFICE, U. S. SHIPPING BOARD, and FEDERAL EMPLOYMENT STABILIZATION OFFICE. All endeavor to be of constant help to American business by cooperating with individuals and with organizations.

VIII

Other Federal Agencies

The FEDERAL TRADE COMMISSION is an independent office which was created in 1914. Its duties are divided into two broad classes, legal and economic. Over 150 industries have cooperated with the Commission since, in 1919, it commenced holding conferences with industrial groups to formulate rules of business conduct. The Commission also cooperates with the N.R.A., as provided for in the National Industrial Recovery Act of June, 1933, in the making of legal and economic investigations to assist its recovery measures. In the field of foreign trade, the Commission administers the Export Trade Act, or Webb-Pomerene law. This act grants exemption from the anti-trust laws to export combinations or associations which comply with certain requirements of the Commission. Forty-five Webb law export associations were registered with the Commission in 1934.

The U. S. DEPARTMENT OF JUSTICE represents the Federal Government in legal matters generally. Its Anti-trust Division is in charge of suits and other affairs arising under the Sherman and Clayton Acts, and works in close cooperation with the Federal Trade Commission and the NRA on many questions of unfair competition.

Other government agencies of interest to trade associations include:

The NATIONAL RECOVERY ADMINISTRATION. It issues a weekly bulletin, "The Blue Eagle." A 30-page pamphlet, "What is the NRA?" and other informative material can also be obtained, without charge, upon request from that organization.

The UNITED STATES INFORMATION SERVICE. This division of the National Emergency Council, issued in January, 1935, a "United States Government Manual" ($2.00), in which (on approximately 500 pages) is described the organization and activities of all departments and larger bureaus and divisions of the Federal Government. The Service and the Council are located in the Commercial National Bank Building, Washington, D. C.

The majority of industries with NRA approved codes have established headquarters in one of the following cities: New York, Chicago, and Washington, D. C. This office, the TRADE ASSOCIATION SECTION, has recently issued compilations which give the name, address, and the name of the secretary of each of the 500 code authorities in these cities.

SUGGESTIONS FOR ADDITIONS OR CHANGE OF ADDRESSES IN THE FOLLOWING
